The Alliance of Religions and Conservation has produced a colourful, inspirational, hard-hitting guide to issues around food, farming and spirituality to help people make sustainable and faith-consistent choices around the food they eat. Faith in Food: Changing the world one meal at a time is a groundbreaking collaboration between farmers, food lovers and people of faith that combines essays, storytelling, recipes, pioneering initiatives and beautiful food prayers and blessings to form a guide to eating more mindfully.

Today, as we grapple with issues of hunger and poverty, climate change and the industrialisation of our food and farming systems, one of the greatest opportunities to live our values — or betray them — lies in the food we put on our plates. Eating is a moral act; our choices of what, when and how we eat have a huge impact upon the Earth, our fellow human beings and other living creatures. But with so many factors to consider when it comes to choosing food that is ethical and sustainable – as well as healthy and delicious – many people find these issues too big, too confusing and too difficult.

Faith in Food looks at some of the key issues in sustainable food and farming today in a series of articles by key people in leading organisations such as the Soil Association, Compassion In World Farming and WaterAid, Sustainable Food Trust and the Fairtrade Foundation. Contributors include Patrick Holden, Dr Vandana Shiva, Joyce D’Silva, Barbara Frost, Martin Palmer and Helen Browning. HRH The Prince of Wales – who is himself a farmer of 30 years and a passionate advocate of sustainable agriculture – has written the foreword.

Faith in Food, which is packed with beautiful illustrations and photographs from around the world, also looks at the role of food within six major faiths – Buddhism, Christianity, Hinduism, Judaism, Islam and Sikhism. Every faith celebrates food as a gift of the Divine and teaches that we must feed the hungry. Faith in Food includes lovely quotations from holy scriptures, food blessings and examples of foods used in faith celebrations.

Finally, but equally important, Faith in Food offers pragmatic advice for simple changes we can all make in our daily lives, such as eating less meat but choosing instead grass-fed meat to reduce our personal carbon footprint. And it celebrates the inspiring ideas and actions already being undertaken by people of faith that are already laying the foundations towards a fairer, more sustainable, and brighter future.

Faith in Food has been produced on a not-for-profit basis by ARC: ARC’s share of any profits that are generated will go to support faith-based food and farming projects.

Did you know...?

- Agriculture is the largest industry on the planet, employing more than one billion people worldwide and influencing the way half the world’s habitable land is cared for.

- Women farmers produce more than half of all food worldwide.

- Sikhs feed an estimated 30 million people worldwide every day with free food provided in their gurdwaras.

- Nearly a billion people do not have enough to eat, even though sufficient food is produced worldwide.

- Thousands of Jewish households in North America and Israel have put nearly $5 million into sustainable farming by linking up with local farmers through Community Supported Agriculture.

- Every year, consumers in rich countries waste almost as much food as the entire net food production of sub-Saharan Africa.

- When the New Psalmist Baptist Church in Baltimore, USA – an American ‘mega-church’ – began thinking about food and faith issues, it calculated how many events it holds at which food is served. The total was 9,000 a year.

- Up to 30% of our individual carbon footprint comes from the food we eat, from farm gate to dinner plate, including transport and storage, says Patrick Holden, founding director of the Sustainable Food Trust.

- Daoists in China have banned the use of ingredients from endangered plants and animals in food and Traditional Chinese Medicine.

- Replacing red meat and dairy with vegetables one day a week would be the equivalent of driving 1,160 miles less per year, according to a 2007 Carnegie Mellon University study.

‘Never doubt that a small group of thoughtful, committed individuals can change the world; indeed it’s the only thing that ever has.’
– Margaret Mead
Examples of food prayers:

Hymn to the Earth – Hindu prayer

Set me, Earth, amidst the nourishing strength
That emanates from the body.
The Earth is my mother, her child am I;
Infinite space is my father,
May he fill us with plenty.
Peaceful, sweet-smelling, gracious Earth.
Whatever I dig from thee, O Earth,
May that have quick growth again,
May we not injure your vitals or your hearts.
Full of sweetness are the plants and full of sweetness these my words.

— Atharva Veda, Book XII

Christian Prayer

“We give you thanks, most gracious God,
for the beauty of the earth and sky and sea;
for the richness of mountains, plains, and rivers;
for the songs of birds and the loveliness of flowers.
We praise you for these good gifts and pray that we may safeguard them for our posterity.”

— The Book of Common Prayer, Episcopal Church, 1979

Sikh Prayer

You are the Ocean of Water, and I am Your fish.
Your Name is the drop of water,
and I am a thirsty sparrowhawk.
You are my hope and You are my thirst.
My mind is absorbed in You.
Just as the baby is satisfied by drinking milk,
and the poor person is pleased by seeing wealth,
and the thirsty person is refreshed
by drinking cool water,
so is this mind drenched with delight in the Lord.

— This prayer is part of Raag Maajh, the second raga,
or classical religious melody, in Sikhism’s holiest text,
the Sri Guru Granth Sahib

Buddhist Grace

This food is the gift of the whole universe,
Each morsel is a sacrifice of life,
May I be worthy to receive it.
May the energy in this food,
Give me the strength,
To transform my unwholesome qualities into wholesome ones.
I am grateful for this food,
May I realise the Path of Awakening,
For the sake of all beings.
Namo Amida Buddha.
