Why?

Why is it important for faiths to be involved in tackling environmental issues?

Faiths and their networks comprise 85% of the world's population and 50% of schools worldwide are connected to a religious faith. This gives the faith enormous potential for influence on a global scale.

More importantly, care for the natural world is an important founding value of in the traditions and teachings of each of the major faiths. Connecting with environmental action is therefore a spiritual as well as practical process for people of faith.
